SAYINGS OF MRS. SOLOMON.

Being the Confessions of the Seven Hundredth Wife.

Translated by HELEN ROWLAND.

My daughter, these are the proverbs of thy mother, the married woman.

To know men and their roundabout ways; to perceive the difference between near-lovemaking and a real proposal; to distinguish kisses—the kiss of love from the kiss of duty, the kiss of experiment from the kiss of long practice, and all kisses from the kiss of graft. To give subtlety to the debutante, and to the wife a little "useful knowledge."

The understanding of man is the beginning of an allowance; but the foolish shall earn their own living and dwell in a studio apartment. They shall feed upon spaghetti and club sandwiches and weak tea seasoned with condensed milk.

Go to the kitchen, thou suffragette; consider her ways and be wise, which, having no opinions, sleepeth upon a down pillow and getteth the cream off the top without working for it.

For a husband is better than a government position, and more profitable than school teaching. Lo, men do not despise a grafter, if she grafteth from her husband.

Yea, if a man is the producer, shall not a woman be the consumer? For this is reciprocity; and the more she consumeth the more she getteth. Then, let every wife be a walking advertisement of her husband's income, for a wife that looketh like ready money is as good as much credit.

Heed my instruction, for love is a gilded cage to which any woman can entice the bird, but matrimony is the door which only a clever damsel shutteth behind him. Therefore, mark the difference between the foolish and the wise.

For she that directeth with the eye that will not behave shall cause havoc, but she that talketh too much shall give a man mal de mer. As a given permission to the roof of the mouth, so is a woman that telleth a man her "past."

All the ways of a man are "just right" in the eyes of a wise damsel, but the foolish woman saith, "I told you so!"

I charge thee, a good temper is rather to be chosen than good shoulders, and a tender manner than curling hair.

Yet, boast not of what thou art going to marry, for thou knowest not what the market shall bring forth, and she that starteth out to win an Adonis, peradventure shall one day gladly wear a tub.

Verily, verily, cozy corners are deceitful, and pink teas are vain, but a man that proposeth deferred maketh the heart sick; yet when it cometh it shall be so garbled that thou shalt not recognize it. But do not turn it down, for, as the whirlwind passeth, so are old maid no more, yet the bachelor girl endureth forever.

Then be up and doing, for it is never too late to mend; but a time cometh when it shall be too late to marry, and ye shall cry unto yourselves, "My mother told me so!" Selah!

The torpedo experiment ship Montgomery, and Mrs. Simpson, who spent the time with relatives in Baltimore. Commander John H. Gibbons, whom Commander Simpson will succeed in London, will be given a command. Commander Gibbons married Miss Maud Ely, of this city, a few years ago.

GRAND ARMY MEN HONOR THEIR DEAD

Post Attends Services at Metropolitan Church.

DEATH SUBJECT OF SERMON

Rev. Dr. Shannon Declares Man Has Three Births, the Most Glorious of Which Is Death—Post Commander Middleton and Chaplain McKee Take Part in the Services.

Kit Carson Post, No. 2, Grand Army of the Republic, held annual memorial services in the Metropolitan Memorial A. E. Church last evening. Veterans filled the edifice to pay tribute to their honored dead, and of a younger generation also joined in the ceremony.

Post Commander John Middleton read the Scripture lesson at the opening of the service. Chaplain Thomas H. McKee made the opening prayer and delivered a brief eulogy upon the dead soldiers. "God Will Reward These Dead Heroes of Ours," and "The Veteran's Last Song" were sung by the church quartet in recognition of the service.

In this sermon, which was written for the memorial service, Rev. Dr. Shannon described man as an unfolding creature, as a progressive being, having life wrapped within life as leaves in a bud. He said:

"Man passes through three distinct births. He rises from one sphere into another, each successive sphere enlarging his horizon and amazing him by the development of a new order of faculties folded up within him.

First a Birth of the Flesh.

"Man's first birth is a birth of the flesh, which starts him as an earth-born animal creature upon the plane of physical life. The second birth is a birth from above—the birth of which Christ speaks when He says, 'Ye must be born again.' This birth brings man into conscious relations with God, into the experiences of that divine life which is the end of man's being in this world, as fruit is the end of the tree.

"Man's third birth is what we call death. Death is as much a part of God's economy as is our being born into this world. Death is not an accidental after-clap foisted upon the order of things upon this earth. It is an original constituent of the creative plan of our Heavenly Father. Death is an orderly step in our evolution.

"How much false teaching has there been about death? It has been taught that death is no part of God's original plan; that death came into this world as the result of sin; as the result of the transgression of a man called Adam; as the result of the invasion of our earth by an evil force from the outside. All such teaching is utterly baseless. It has not the shadow of a foundation in truth. It is the sheerest superstition."

Death Has No Terrors.

Dr. Shannon declared it was supremely unfortunate that death had been pictured under the aspects of horror, as under figures of skulls and cross bones, of skeletons with scythe and hour glass, of hideous monsters brandishing awful darts. All such pictures are absolutely false.

"Thousands of worlds turned into solid gold," he continued, "would tempt me to accept the gift of physical immortality upon this earth. Why we have learned life's lessons, why then should we want to stay here as a prisoner, when everlasting heavens are beckoning to us to come, that we may know what they mean and how they are inhabited?"

"When we learn to look upon death as we should look upon it, as part of our Heavenly Father's original plan, as a birth in our evolution toward our great destiny, then instead of shrinking back from death as from a horrible abyss into whose impenetrable darkness we are forced to go, we can move toward death with the light of glorious hope in our face.

"The caterpillars gather round a chrysalis, a worm-form from which the butterfly has emerged. They weep as they say, 'Our companion is dead; here is the lifeless form.' But their companion is born into a higher existence, where, as a soaring, radiantly hued butterfly, it lives in a realm of sunshine, sipping the nectar of flowers. Oh, that we might know, when in tears we gather around the lifeless form of a loved one and say 'He is dead,' that what we call death is the beautiful order of God birth into higher realms of light and beauty, of music and victory."

ZOO GETS A GOAT.

It's One of the Rocky Mountain Variety—Also Gets a Cassowary.

The Zoo has just received a goat and a cassowary. A cassowary is a bird, and a goat's a goat. This particular horned ruminant is noteworthy because it is the first Rocky Mountain goat the Zoo has ever had. The Zoo people up in Canada sent it down, and it was put on exhibition for the first time yesterday. It is pure white, with long black horns, and is used to jump off high precipices in the mountains.

The placing of the birds in the outdoor cages is the final sign of the surrender of the Washington Zoo authorities to the advance of spring. Another sign of the times is the recent hatching of a healthy brood of nine young wild turkeys. Being innocents, they still are allowed the freedom of the grounds.

Five chamois, recently presented to the Department of the Interior by the government of Switzerland, are now in quarantine near New York. They will be released at the Zoo in a few days.

Newspaper Man Preaches.

The "Downmost man" was the subject of an address delivered at the People's Church yesterday morning by Rev. Charles Ferguson, former pastor of All Souls' Church, Kansas City, but now engaged in newspaper work in New York. Taking as his text the story of the prodigal son, the speaker claimed the principles of brotherhood and mutual help, illustrated by the parable of Jesus, must be applied to modern conditions of poverty and unemployment if civilization is not to go backward.
